REEF Field Surveys offer a fun and educational way to contribute to marine conservation. Led by expert underwater naturalists, scuba divers and snorkelers will learn to identify marine life and conduct fish population surveys that assist scientists in making informed resource management decisions. A unique combination of classroom presentations, group discussion and survey dives make Field Surveys the ideal choice for people just getting started with diving or “fish watching.” We invite you to join a REEF Field Survey team of like-minded divers and snorkelers who want to make a difference for the future of our oceans.
