REEF INVASIVE SPECIES PROGRAM

BACKGROUND

Invasive lionfish (Pterois volitans) are an ever-increasing environmental problem throughout the Atlantic, Caribbean, and Gulf of Mexico. Their predation on native fish and invertebrates can cause dramatic declines in these populations. These venomous, invasive fish have few local predators and breed year-round, allowing for rapid population expansion. Lionfish derbies and workshops are a useful tool in stimulating local control efforts and encouraging reports and removal of other non-native marine species.

DERBIES AND WORKSHOPS

A lionfish derby is a team competition aimed to collect as many lionfish as possible. Prizes are awarded to the teams with the most, biggest, and smallest lionfish caught.

Our derbies include day-long festivals with: cooking contests, free lionfish tastings, educational booths, live music, and kids activities. These festivals are promoted to REEF's 70,000 members and advertised through local and national media. We offer collecting and handling workshops with collection dives to train divers and increase removal efforts.

OUR GOALS:

INCREASE EDUCATION AND AWARENESS

Lionfish derbies, workshops and education programs serve to educate participants and the public and raise awareness of the problem. Significant local, national, and international media coverage of derby events has helped facilitate education to those not geographically connected to the invaded range.

REMOVE SIGNIFICANT NUMBERS OF LIONFISH

Research studies indicate that even single day removal events can be highly effective in lowering the local lionfish population. REEF has facilitated the removal of over 60,000 lionfish through lionfish derbies, workshops, and research.

TRAIN DIVERS, ENCOURAGE ONGOING REMOVALS

REEF derbies help build a volunteer removal force by equipping divers with necessary skills, and by encouraging ongoing removals. Local education programs engage the next generation of ocean stewards. And encourage reports and rapid removal of nonnative sightings.

PROVIDE SAMPLES FOR RESEARCH

Collecting data on local lionfish populations year after year helps scientists assess how the population is changing over time. Samples are provided to regional scientists for ecological and biological studies. Collaborations formed between fishermen, scientists, and managers at these derby events are vital to informing and improving management efforts.

HELP DEVELOP MARKETS

After the lionfish are brought in and scored, volunteers fillet and prepare the lionfish, and the public is invited to try free tastings. This is the first time many spectators have tasted lionfish or learned how to safely handle and fillet lionfish.
